

Experience the 'Royal Treatment' at Luxury Hotels This Summer

July 23, 2014

Travelers can take advantage of the 'Royal Treatment' this summer, with three amazing programs taking place across the globe.

From a Seychelles hideaway where Kate and Will took their honeymoon, to an award-winning Chef in Virginia who recently cooked for Queen Elizabeth and an Artist in Residence in Ireland who painted her portrait which currently resides in Buckingham Palace, there's no better time for an exclusive, royal retreat.

Travelers can "Unwined" at the foot of the picturesque Blue Ridge Mountains and enjoy a meal fit for a Queen at the award-winning The Inn at Little Washington with the current Vin Voyage Package. Fit for connoisseurs and lovers of all fine wine, this package includes luxe accommodations in one of The Inn's 24-richly appointed guestrooms, suites and private cottages, travelers welcome cocktails, afternoon tea, a full breakfast for two, a ten course Gastronomer Tasting menu from acclaimed and Relais Grand Chef Patrick O'Connell. Often referred to as "the Pope of American Cuisine," Chef O'Connell was asked to cook for Queen Elizabeth at the Governor's Mansion in Richmond on her recent visit to Virginia. The Package also includes a visit RdV Vineyard, inclusive of comprehensive tours of the vineyard, winery and underground caves followed by a blind tasting in the Salon. Available from June 1 - September 15, rates begin at $1,767.
